States with Palliative Care Information Campaigns

State	Legislation	Public Education Requirements	State's Palliative Care Website Content
Alabama	Code of Alabama §22-5C	The state's palliative care information and education program requires the Department of Public Health's website to include: -Continuing education opportunities for providers; -Palliative care delivery in the home and other environments; and -Consumer-oriented educational materials about referrals for palliative care, including hospice.	Includes information about palliative care, an overview of the State Advisory Council on Palliative Care and Quality of Life, and a list of state and national palliative care resources.
Georgia	O.C.G.A § 31-7-193	The palliative care consumer and professional information and education program requires the Department of Community Health's website to include: -Continuing education opportunities for providers; -Information about palliative care delivery in the home and other environments; -Best practices for palliative care delivery; and -Consumer educational materials and referral informaton for palliative care, including hospice.	Information on palliative care includes who is eligible, what the experience of receiving care is like, and the difference between pediatric and adult palliative care services. The website also includes both state and national palliative care resources.
Kansas	Kan. Stat. Ann. § 65-1261	The palliative care consumer and professional information and education program requires the Department of Health and Environment's website to publish information about palliative care, including: -Continuing education opportunities for providers; -Palliative care delivery in the home and other settings; and -Consumer educational materials and referral information for palliative care, including hospice.	N/A
Massachusetts	ALM GL ch. 111, § 234	Palliative care consumer and professional information and education program - Requires Department of Public Health's website to include information about: -Continuing education opportunities for providers; -Palliative care delivery in the home and other environments; and -Consumer educational materials and referral information for palliative care, including hospice.	Includes information on palliative care, the differences between palliative care and hospice, and palliative care services provided in the state.

States with Palliative Care Information Campaigns

State	Legislation	Public Education Requirements	State's Palliative Care Website Content
Missouri	§ 191.1085 R.S.Mo.	The palliative care consumer and professional information and education program requires the Department of Health and Senior Services website to include information about: -Continuing education opportunities for providers; -Palliative care delivery in the home and other environments; and -Consumer educational materials and referral information for palliative care, including hospice.	The website contains information about hospice services and a link to the Missouri Hospice and Palliative Care Association.
Montana	50-12-205, MCA	The palliative care consumer and professional information and education program requires the Department of Public Health and Human Services' website to include information about: -Continuing education opportunities for providers; -Palliative care delivery in the home and other environments; and -Consumer educational materials and referral information for palliative care, including hospice.	The website includes information on hospice.
Nebraska	Nebraska Revised Statute 71-4501 et seq.	The palliative care consumer and professional information and education program requires the Department of Health and Human Services' website to include information about: -Continuing education opportunities for providers; -Palliative care delivery in the home and other environments; and -Consumer educational materials and referral information for palliative care, including hospice.	The website includes information about palliative care providers and services in the state and resources for patients/families, resources on pediatric care, and resources for providers.
Nevada	Nev. Rev. Stat. Ann. § 232.4858	The palliative care and quality of life consumer and professional information and education program requires the Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS) to create a website with information about: -Delivery of palliative care in the home and other environments; -Best practices for delivery of palliative care; and -Educational materials and referral information for palliative and hospice care.	The website includes information about the Advisory Council on Palliative Care and Quality of Life and an FAQ section that includes information about palliative care, including where it can be provided, how to choose the best options, and the differences between palliative care and hospice.
Rhode Island	RIGL § 23-89	The palliative care consumer and professional information and education program requires the Department of Health website to publish information about palliative care.	The website includes an overview of palliative care, including information about where it can be provided.

States with Palliative Care Information Campaigns

State	Legislation	Public Education Requirements	State's Palliative Care Website Content
South Carolina	H 4935	Requires the Division on Aging website to publish information about palliative care, including: -Continuing education opportunities for providers; -Information about palliative care delivery in the home and other environments; -Best practices for palliative care delivery; and -Consumer educational materials and referral information for palliative care, including hospice.	N/A
Texas	TX Health and Safety Code Ch. 118	The palliative care consumer and professional information and education program requires the Health and Human Services Commission's website to include: -Links to external resources about palliative care; -Continuing education opportunities for providers; -Information about palliative care delivery in the home and other environments; and -Consumer educational materials addressing palliative care, including hospice care.	The website provides an overview of palliative care, including the different types of palliative care that are available. The website also included links to the Center to Advance Palliative Care and Get Palliative Care's resources.
Virginia	HB 1675	The state requires information about palliative care to be displayed on the Virginia Department of Health's website, including: -Delivery of palliative care in the home and other environments; -Best practices for the delivery of palliative care; -Consumer education materials and referral information for palliative care; and -Continuing education opportunities for providers.	The website provides an overview of palliative care, information about where palliative care can be delivered, and links to other resources. The website also includes best practices for providers and continuing education materials for them.
Wyoming	Wyo. Stat. § 35-1-1201-1205	The Department of Health is required to provide publicly available information on its website about: -Palliative care providers and facilities; -Palliative care delivery in the home, community outpatient and inpatient settings; -Best practices for palliative care delivery; -Consumer education materials; and -Referral information for palliative care, including hospices.	The website provides an overview of the charter, a brief overview of what palliative care is, and several links to national palliative care resources.